My first attack in this curious room is upon the mantel. There, some Bibles and prayer books, in Norse, repose. Opening the former, I begin to read in St. Paul s Epistle to the Romans; and remembering the English unrevised text, the similarity of the languages interested me. Father Ole Bolkesoe watches me out of one corner of his eye. He asks our guide in Norse: Is he a priest? When informed that I was only a Congressman, he rushed to his docket or register, and with great delight shows the names of U. S. Grant and wife, our Consul Gaade, and the Prince of Monte Negro. They had honored his inn. This was a compliment, which was appreciated. I asked him if...
