Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Lie down, play dead. She ll lose interest if she thinks you re dead. All cats do. Victorian London. England. A time of innovation and experimentation, in a place where primitive problems still plague the city, such as the stink from the River Thames, the fog that infests the streets, and time-travel, or the lack of it. Then objects mysteriously begin to appear in the guest room of one Harley Street physician. Edward Fallion discovered for himself how a simple mistake changed the course of history, and of parallel time-streams inhabited by earth-like species that evolution favoured instead of humankind. Keeping the species apart is what drives Fallion. A task made that much harder by inventors leaving time-doors open, leaving it to Fallion, as the self-appointed closer of time-doors, to find out who opened them and how. He is only human though, and like the rest of us, he isn t always right.
