State of New York, in 1823, and commenced his professional life in 1824, on the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal. In 1825 was engaged on the Delaware and Hudson Canal as resident engineer, under John B. Jervis. In 1827 resigned his position and visited England in search of professional information in railroad matters, that new era in intercommunication and transportation being then in process of development. During this visit, he was requested by John B. Jervis, Esq., to contract for the iron for the Delaware and. Hudson Railroad, and for the first locomotive ever ordered and brought to America. On his return he took charge of the Stourbridge Lion, the first locomotive ever put upon a railroad in America, and his hand opened the valve upon the engine that turned the first driving-wheel upon the American continent. Mr. Allen HORATIO ALLEN. was also engaged...
